

Primo Central Index Collection List - Alternative Coverage Analysis

The Primo Central Index Collection List contains information about the coverage of key collections in the Primo Central Index. A collection is covered by Primo Central if:

- The collection is indexed or in the process of being indexed in Primo Central following an agreement between Ex Libris and the collection provider.
- Ex Libris does not have an agreement with the collection provider to index the content of the collection, but some coverage of the titles included in the collection is available through other collections already indexed or in the process of being indexed (“alternative coverage”). In this case, the Primo Central Index Collection List indicates the percentage of the collection’s current coverage in Primo Central.

The following list provides additional information about collections for which Ex Libris does not have an agreement with the collection provider. For each such collection, the list indicates the Primo Central collections that the customer should activate in order to achieve alternative coverage.

Information included in the list:

Collection – name of the collection for which we do not yet have an agreement with the collection provider

Provider – The provider of the collection

Index Coverage - Percentage of the collection’s coverage in the Primo Central Index when all collections listed under “Alternative Collections for Activation” are activated.

Note: Coverage is measured at the title level and only for current titles with an ISSN/e-ISSN.

Alternative Collections for Activation – Primo Central collections that should be activated in order to achieve the coverage listed under “Index Coverage.”

Collections marked with (*) are available to users from subscribing institutions only. All other collections are freely searchable by all Primo Central customers.

Collections in green contain open access content.

Updated: April 2017
