for dates/times and how to register

Open Access Week

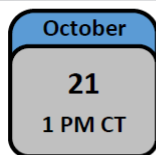

NDUS: OER Z-Degree & OER as a Tool for Social Justice

Presenters: Sybil Priebe, NDSCS; Virginia Clinton-Lisell, UND

Does NDSCS have a hidden Z-Degree? Sybil Priebe's NDUS Fellowship project attempts to answer that question; she'll share her preliminary research and what she's dug up thus far.

Open Educational Resources as a Tool for Social Justice. OER afford opportunities to make courses more inclusive. In addition to saving students money, OER are editable meaning that they can be adapted to be more diverse and to involve more active student involvement in classes.

Open Access Week

NDUS: Getting Started with OER

Presenter: Abbey Elder, Open Access & Scholarly Communication Librarian, Iowa State University

Are you concerned about the cost of your current textbook and its impact on your students? Are you interested in exploring other material options for your course? This webinar will introduce you on getting started with open educational resources (OER). Participants will leave with an understanding of what OER are, how to find them, and best practices for evaluating and using OER in a course. In addition, the presenter will share some resources available for those interested in learning more, including her own OER Starter Kit, a handbook for faculty.

Open Access Week

NDUS: Getting Started with OER Initiatives on Campus

Presenter: Abbey Elder, Open Access & Scholarly Communication Librarian, Iowa State University

Running an OER initiative on your campus is not as simple as "if you build it, they will come." In this presentation, Abbey will share her experience building an OER initiative at Iowa State University. Participants will gain an understanding of the steps to creating an OER committee on campus, communicating with stakeholders, and common OER projects in the US."
