ODIN Work Day
April 10, 2018

Lynn Wolf

Overview

We will revisit some of the basic configuration options available to your library such as:

- Home page
- Search box
- Search limiters
- Search results
- Brief results
- Full results

Front End Views

Home Page Tiles

- Each view has a Home Page which serves as the user interface and presents basic information, links, and search box.

header.html

Typically this will be the library's logo with a clickable link to their Library Home webpage.

If your library has implemented a new logo, you will need to let us know so we can get it updated.

Header examples

Grand Forks Public Library

North Dakota State College of Science

help.html

This section can contain links for New Search, Journal List (connects to SFX a-z list), Library Home, Contact or Help. Some libraries have also added links to pages they maintain locally such as a database list, How-To Guides, or Search Tips. These links can be defined to either open in the current or a new window.

The screenshot shows the ExLibris Primo website interface. At the top, the header includes the ExLibris Primo logo, the text "header.html", and navigation links for "Guest", "e-Shelf", "My Account", and "Sign in". Below the header is a search bar with "Find Databases" and "Library Search" options, and a "help.html" link highlighted with a blue box. A blue arrow points from the "help.html" link down to the "news.html" link in the "Library News and Events" section. The main content area is divided into several sections: "What is Primo?", "featured.html", "Library News and Events" (with "news.html" link), "Library Services" (with "services.html" link), "Trending Search Topics", "From the Blog", "What's New", "Primo on iPhone", and "Primo on Twitter". The footer contains navigation links like "Home", "Blog", "RSS feed", "FAQ", "Disclaimer", "Contact Us", and "footer.html", along with copyright information and a "Last Updated: September 7, 2009" notice.

Search Box

Allows patron to enter search terms.

Scopes – Data Building Blocks

- A search scope groups records so that a search can be restricted to only those records.
- Search scopes can consist of:
  - Individual libraries
  - Individual sublibraries
  - Collection from remote data source (such as ContentDM or DSpace)
- Each tab within a view can have one or more scopes

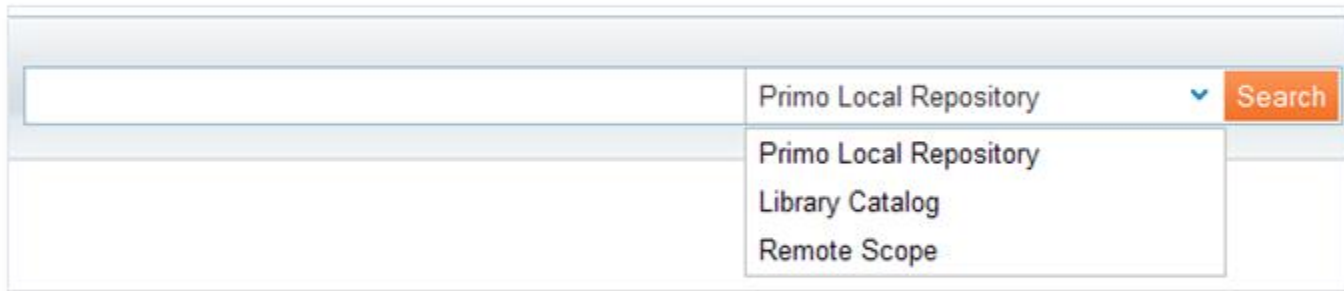

Format options for a search box -- basic search, multiple scopes (dropdown), multiple tabs or combination of scopes and tabs. Most libraries are using either the Multiple Scopes or Multiple Tabs option.

A search interface with two tabs at the top: "Everything" (selected) and "Remote Resources". Below the tabs is a text input field and an orange "Search" button on the right.

Example of Multiple Scopes:

ODIN view – dropdown contains each ADM as well as all our ALEPH libraries

Search Limiters

Allows pre-filter of search results.

Precision operator allows limiting search:

-- that contain my query words

-- with my exact phrase

-- starts with

Search Limiters

The second prefilter option involves limiting within certain fields.

Most views have filters to limit search by:

- Anywhere in record (default)
- In the title
- As author/creator
- In subject

With some views also adding:

- ISBN
- ISSN
- Call Number
- Collection
- Series title

- Description: A remarkable story of resilience, heartbreak, and ultimately triumph follows a young woman's international travels after she is deported to Botany Bay in Australia for stealing a woman's bonnet and manages to find her way home again after a long ordeal. On a moonless night in the early 1790s, prisoner Mary Bryant, her husband William, her two small children, and seven other convicts stole a twenty-foot longboat and slipped noiselessly out of Sydney Cove, Australia, eluding their captors. They sailed north, all the way to Indonesia, traveling some thirty-six hundred treacherous miles in ten weeks-- an incredible feat of seamanship. For a time, Mary and her companions were able to convince the local Dutch colonial authorities that they were survivors of a shipwreck, but eventually the truth emerged and they found themselves back in captivity, in irons, on their way to England for execution. In time, Mary's fateful journey would win her tremendous admiration. A woman once reviled as a criminal would become a London celebrity, ultimately finding forgiveness and freedom. In The Girl from Botany Bay, distinguished historian and biographer Carolly Erickson tells Mary Bryant's remarkable story at full length for the first time-- the story of a woman whose impoverished Cornwall childhood led to a life of outlaw daring and thievery, then to harsh imprisonment and exile. Erickson recounts Mary's bold ventures from her point of view, beginning with her conviction and death sentence for highway robbery. Reprieved, she was sent to New South Wales to serve out her time, one of dozens of female convicts chosen as sexual companions for the hundreds of male convicts destined for settlement in the remote continent of Australia. From Mary's perilous sea journey to Botany Bay and Sydney Cove, to the inhuman conditions at the penal colony, to the risky escape to the Indonesian island of Timor and the horrors of the sail back to England-- during which Mary's husband and two children died of disease-- the story is harrowing yet heroic. With the dramatic narrative skill for which she is acclaimed, Erickson brings Mary and her companions to life in compelling detail. All the dangers of seafaring adventure are here: violent storms, near drownings, severe hunger and thirst, and the perils of relentless exposure to sun, wind, and salt spray that left the convicts with their skin scraped raw and their strength leached away. When she finally landed in England and testified before the magistrate's court, Mary was magnificent in her own defense. No one had the heart to condemn her; had she not, through her suffering, paid for her crimes? Impressed by Mary's sturdy self-possession and courage, lawyer and author James Boswell came to her rescue, ensuring that "the Girl from Botany Bay," as the newspapers called her, was freed and able to begin a new life. Includes bibliographical references (p. 219-221) and index.
